TEACH YOUR CHILDREN

IF YOU DON'T FILL YOUR DAY OR LIFE WITH CHALLENGES THAT INSPIRE YOU, IT WILL FILL UP WITH CHALLENGES THAT DON'T. CHALLENGES THAT INSPIRE YOU CAN BE THE SOURCE OF EUSTRESS, ACHIEVEMENT AND WELLNESS, WHEREAS CHALLENGES THAT DON'T CAN BE THE SOURCE OF DISTRESS, AGEING AND ILLNESS.

DR JOHN DEMARTINI SAYS LEADERS WITH GREAT WISDOM PURSUE CHALLENGING, INSPIRING, MEANINGFUL AND CONTRIBUTIVE ENDEAVORS.

When your 12 year old boy whose temporary highest values revolve around conquering the next most popular on line video game has worked diligently and mastered his more recent purchase, he naturally yearns to expand his dexterity and creative skills once again and ingeniously tackle the next most challenging online video game of ever greater complexity. He does not require any extrinsic motivation, reminders, or incentives by you to arise each morning and work intently and enthusiastically on this primary or chief aim; he simply naturally yearns to become the video game master he envisions. He may have to be reminded to do his uninspiring school homework, or chores, and thereby feel momentarily impeded, but he spontaneously is inspired from within to do what he loves most. He has a built in desire to master what he focuses on most with enthusiasm and tackle ever greater challenges that accompany his inspiring pursuit along the way.

As he matures and as his highest values evolve, his most inspiring pursuits naturally evolve along with them. If he has become used to pursuing his video game dreams and tackling ever greater challenges from his youth he will have a greater probability of growing in confidence in conquering other areas of life to become master of his fate. He is more likely to become master of his destiny more than victim of his history. His growth naturally becomes accelerated with every new game, problem, or challenge that he conquers. He repeatedly excels in what he is inspired by most. The executive centre in his developing forebrain comes more and more on line with increased blood, glucose and oxygen as he awakens his next inspired vision, strategically plans, executes and masterfully self-governs his highly prioritised actions.

Of course, you as his parent, being member of the previous generation, may tend to project your more conventional set of values and well-meaning intentions onto your son in an attempt to moderate, or in some cases impede your child's natural desire for tackling ever greater challenges or problems, not realising that the very new games that seem to you to be meaningless are the very temporary sources of meaning and empowerment along the way and act as a catalyst for his future leadership development in his later, more socially contributive endeavors.

As new values evolve and emerge within your son - the soon independent young man, his similarly new natural yearnings can fulfill the same outcomes of developing his inner governance and self-mastery with his new and more expanded objectives. If he discovers what is truly most important to him and learns the vital skill of seeing how whatever comes along his way can be perceived as on the way more than in the way, he will embrace the many challenges that emerge as catalysts for accelerated and hormonally driven growth, development and achievement.

When he learns to ask himself, How specifically is whatever I am experiencing at present helping me fulfill my highest values and chief aim? he will then awaken his executive centre and empower his natural innate and emerging leader from within.

Like for biology in general whatever is not "negentropically" ordered and directed by life physics becomes "entropically" disordered and scattered death physics. When your son and developing young man brings order into his life by strategically pursuing what truly inspires him he is less vulnerable to the outer forces of disordering entropy that result from the scattering influences of others. When his voice and vision on the inside becomes greater and more profound than all opinions on his outside he naturally begins to master his life.

Like for your son, whether you are a young man still at heart or now a matured man of more ripened age, if you do not fill your day with high priority actions that inspire you, it will automatically fill up with low priority actions that won't. And, if you do not fill your day with meaningful challenges that inspire you and that serve ever greater numbers of others or humanity, it will fill up with challenges that create distress and desperation to warn you. These less fulfilling feelings are nothing more than essential feedback mechanisms to assure that you eventually return to pursuing what is truly inspiring and meaningful in your life. Nature has a way of honing you in over time to be authentic with who you truly are. You and your son are leaders deep within waiting to emerge. 🏰
