It states that every country in the world has a resource or commodity that makes up their specialty niche: something that it is the greatest at or that gives them a competitive advantage. Whenever a country targets exporting that specialty, the economies in that country grow. This law also applies to your life. When you focus on your highest values, you are tapping into your greatest resources and sharing those resources with the world. When you “export” these resources, not only are you most profitable, but the world benefits too.’*
